Branding Cattle without an Iron

Cattle have been iron branded since the early stages of their existence in this country. Each and every year, the boys go out to round up their herd, and with the assistance of their family or neighbors they put their brand on their cattle. That brand not only stands for their ownership, but it stands for their pride and joy in what they accomplished during the year. While times may not be changing the brands on the side of the cattle, there is a knew kind of "brand" that represents the reputation those cattle have in the pasture, in the feedyard, and on the rail. And this reputation-oriented brand can certainly pay dividends when it's time to sell those calves.

A perfect example of the power of a reputable brand can be found in the fast-food industry. McDonald's is one of the largest, most successful fast-food restaurants in this country because of three main components: they are fast, they are cheap, and they use American beef. Recently, due to competitive pressure in the fast-food industry, McDonald's made a tactical error. They changed one of the three main components that made them king of the hamburgers. To lower their initial costs, they decided to use the cheaper priced, imported beef. The "brand" that existed

Value of Cooperation

Vertical cooperation is a necessity for maximum profit. Over the years, Schiefelbein Farms and their customers have certainly understood the value of cooperation. A recent example of this value is the Schiefelbein buy-back program in New Mexico. In the last two years, through the efforts of beef extension agent and local cattle rancher Blair Clavel, Schiefelbein Farms Buy-back program was implemented in the great southwest. New Mexico ranchers purchased Schiefelbein bulls and the Schiefelbein Farms followed up by purchasing some New Mexico calves.

That first year, we experienced significant health problems with the calves we purchased. Death losses were high resulting in big feeding losses. Through the cooperation of Schiefelbein Farms, Bezner Beef, Blair Clavel, and the New Mexico ranchers, we came up with an effective vaccination and management program. This year, Schiefelbein Farms once again purchased calves from those New Mexico ranchers. As of right now, the mortality rate for those calves at Bezner Beef is well within acceptable ranges. Now that's an example of the value of cooperation!

on the famous Big Mac could no longer include "made with 100% American beef." Since the inclusion of imported beef, McDonald's market share has taken a turn for the worse; for the first time in their long and profitable history, the McDonald's corporation lost money. Consumers are dissatisfied with the consistency of the burgers and are much more suspicious of the imported beef. No longer does McDonald's offer the same proven Big Mac brand, made with American beef. Without that brand, McDonald's has become just another cheap burger place.

Schiefelbein Farms understands that putting a reputable brand on your cattle can be a valuable asset. The Schiefelbein brand stands for high-quality, consistent cattle, with a solid reputation. Such a brand is wanted and needed in the beef industry. The goal of the Schiefelbein brand is to put more dollars in your pocket, and the formula is simple: use Schiefelbein bulls in your herd and watch the returns come in. Not only will you receive a premium price for your predictable calves through the Schiefelbein Buy-Back program (where we bid on or buy Schiefelbein sired calves), but each year afterward the reputation of those calves will grow by leaps and bounds. Your Schiefelbein sired

Meet the Family

The success of any organization always comes down to the people involved. Schiefelbein Farms is no different. We have been blessed to be able to work together as a family... not an easy task considering that our family consists of Frank & Frosty, their 9 sons, 7 daughter in-laws and 25 grandchildren.

Spotlight on Bill Schiefelbein

Bill was the 3rd oldest of the nine sons. Bill attended the University of Minnesota majoring in Animal Science. Unfortunately, Bill developed a mental condition in his early twenties... paranoid schizophrenia. This terrible disease takes control of the mind, turning yourself into another person that believes everyone is out to get you. Bill battled this relentless disease for over 10 years before taking his own life in 1992. Since that time, Frank has devoted a huge portion of his time and energy towards working to cure mental illnesses. Frank currently serves on the Minnesota Mental Health board where he is working to ensure that people suffering from mental illness are able to receive equitable treatment and health coverage.

calves will be sought after because of their reputation of consistency and quality in the pasture, in the feedyard, and on the rail. These are the traits that the industry has been looking for in recent years. The Schiefelbein added-value brand will put you ahead of the cattle industry curve—genetically and financially.

This spring, when it's time to purchase bulls for the upcoming year, remember: your iron brand will stand not only for the ownership of your calves, but also for the quality of the calf behind it. Make sure that your brand stands for reputable, Schiefelbein sired calves that will perform well across the board. Just ask a McDonald's executive if brands are important and affect the bottom line. And if you don't believe them, ask a Schiefelbein customer if their calves are worth more at sale time. The answer is simple: "It pays to have Schiefelbein sired calves!"

You Buy, We Bid!

At Schiefelbein Farms, we don't just sell bulls!

We ensure our customers' success by actively purchasing calves sired by our bulls. Each time our customers have calves for sale, we're either in the seats or on the phone: protecting, bidding or buying our customers' calves -- helping them bring top dollar.

Over the past 10 years, we've been bidding on and buying calves sired from our bulls. In 2002 alone, we bid on 7,500 head of customer calves -- purchasing 50% of them. 100% of our customers received a premium... and most topped the market.

Contact us today for more information on our unique program and our upcoming bull sales.
